BANKS BESIEGE SECRETARY SHAW.

Many Are Anxious to Help Distribute $40,000,000 Emergency Fund.

POLITICAL PULL IS

Senators and Representatives Urge Claims of Their Constituents - Depositories Already Selected Not Yet Announced.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Washington, Sept. 3.-Since the publication of the fact that Secretary Shaw has selected a list of banks to be designated as United States depositories in the distribution of his emergency fund, many of the banks that have had applications before the department are redoubling their efforts to obtain the desired privilege, and others are sending in applications. All kinds of political influences are in force, and the Secretary on his return may find himself in hot water.

In his absence no statement can be obtained at the Treasury Department as to the method by which it was determined just which banks should receive deposits, but the impression prevails among some bankers that selections were made in some cases as a result of influence, and they are bringing all of the political pressure to bear that they can obtain. In ome cases Senators and Representatives are strongly urging that certain banks be given deposits.

are strongly urging that certain banks be given deposits.

Just how many banks were selected by Secretary Shaw before his departure from Washington cannot be definitely stated. Up to yesternay the number that had actually qualified and received deposits was five. It developed to-day that the number selected was larger than this, though the only definite statement that could be obtained was that a few banks scattered all over the country had been chosen.

It is said that the creation of these depositories and the slight increase in the total amount of Government deposits that will be made soon does not necessarily hedicate any new departure on the part of the Treasury Department, but that these depositions will be made until Secretary will then be to the done and no more selections will be made until Secretary will then be cannot be foretold, but it is certain that the banks expect the policy of creating new depositories to be continued and that it will require great firmness on the part of the Secretary has a fund of $40,000,000 specially set apart for the express purpose of placing.

When the fact that this fund had been set apart first became known it was helieved by most of those in close touch with the affairs of the department that it would be held intact and that deposits would not be materially increased unless it should become apparent that the country would be subjected to a momentary stringency with abnormally high interest rates. But then some of the banks assumed that the money was to be put out at once and began to urge their calms for part of it.

If the Secretary should determine not to go any further in the direction of creating new depositories or if he should crea it the Secretary should determine not to go any further in the direction of creating new depositories or if he should create only a comparatively small number in addition to those already selected every bank that has an application in and that does not secure a deposit will think that it has been badly treated.

The banks do not now expect the Secretary to stop at the point he has reached. They believe that he will continue to increase the deposits and they argue that the situation of the country is such as to justify him in doing so.

According to the bank view of the situation, the Secretary of the Treasury now has it in his power to remove all fear of a tight money market during the cropmoving season, and they commend him for putting out the money before the demand for it has become acute and interest rates have advanced to an abnormal level.

The force of this argument will un-

The force of this argument will undoubtedly be appreciated in many quarters, but it will not stand in the way of Democratic criticism of the Secretary's action. The tendency of the Democratic to criticise the collection of surplus revenues and the placing of the money thus obtained in the national banks, has already been made apparent, and, even if the Secretary should go no further than he has already gone, there is no doubt that Democratic politicians throughout the country will selze the opportunity to charge him with favoritism.

The force of this criticism would have been much weakened if no new depositories had been created until there were more apparent indications that a monetary stringency was imminent.

The Democrats will be able to point, however, to the declarations of Mr. Cannon and others that the West and South have plenty of money this year and do not need assistance from any quarter.

BEAUPRE HAS FULL POWER. Government Leaves Him Unrestricted in Canal Negotiations.

PANIC IN COTTON MARKET WAS NARROWLY AVERTED.

Prices Dropped Two Dollars a Bale, When Brown and Sully Came to the Rescue and Checked the Slump-Rumored That a Leak Occurred in the Government Report-Exciting Times in the CONDITION OF COTTON FAR ABOVE TEN-YEAR AVERAGE.

Washington, Sept. 3 .- The monthly report of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture will show the average condition of cotton on August 25 to have been 81.2, as compared with 79.7 on July 25, 1903; 64.0 on August 26, 1902; 71.4 on August 24, 1901, and a ten-year average of 72.4. The following table shows the condition by States on August 25 in each of the last three years and that on July 25, 1908, with the ten-year averages:

Aug. 25, July 25, Aug. 26, Aug. 24, 10-year 1903. Texas ... Georgia Alabama Mississippi South Carolina . Arkansas Louisiana Indian Territory Oklahoma Florida Missouri Virginia

New York, Sept. 3.-Cotton dropped $3 a at 11.51, rose to 11.54 and gradually worked bale and conditions were rapidly shaping down to 11.40. Then there was a widetoward a panic in the market to-day when open break, with the difference of 10 William P. Brown, the leader of the points between transactions and a plunge Southern clique, appeared in the pit and down to 11.12.

In October the decline was from 10.48 to Sully, leader of the New England pool. 10.38; in December from 10.12 to 9.93, and in commenced to bid up quotations in the January from 10.90 to 9.91. This reprenew crop months. This turned the tide of sented a loss of from $1 to $2 a bale, or affairs and prevented what looked to be a about 1/2 cent a pound in the case of Sepserious situation.

The fall in the September options from 11.54 to 11.13 was due to a general selling movement, based on the belief that the Government report would be much more bullish than had been hitherto expected. This was borne out later on, when the figures were read, showing a condition several points higher than the most optimistle trader in cotton had foretold. The percentage given was $1.2, compared with 79.7 last month, and 64 per cent a year ago. This points to a crop of about 11,000,000 bales. On this basis a great many brokers thought that ruling prices for the staple were too high, so they sold, and Mr. Brown and Mr. Sully had to come to the rescue of their respective pools. It was evident at the opening of the market to-day that everything depended on the showing made by the Government report that was expected at noon. Very little business was done in the first hour, then prices began to decline slowly, and it was rumored that there had been a leak the fact that the greater part of the rein the information given out by the Department of Agriculture. The first signs of severe weakness ap- further selling on the strength of to-day's Civil Instead of Religious Service in Marrying Clara Miller.

Whether to have a civil or religious ceremony was a question that agitated John E. Buchhold and Clara M. Miller for nearly an hour in the corridor of the Courthouse at Clayton yesterday. Buchhold gave his address at No. 1840

South Twelfth street, and his bride-elect at No. 1947 Wyoming street. The couple were accompanied by their mothers, Mrs. Wilhelmina Buchhold and Mrs. Clara Miller, as they were barely of age.

After the license was issued the couple started away, but stopped in the Courthouse corridor, where Buchhold inquired for a Magistrate. His mother opposed the idea of civil marriage, and insisted that they return to St. Louis and have the ceremony performed by a minister.

Mrs. Miller did not agree with her, and the matter was argued with much earnestness for nearly an hour, thereby attracting a crowd. at No. 1947 Wyoming street. The couple estness for nearly an hour, thereby at-tracting a crowd.

Buchhod finally decided to be married by the State, and went into Probate Judge Wurdeman's office. As the couple were standing up to have the knot tied, his mother called him out and again urged a religious wedding, but to no avail. Then she cried, but the ceremony went on.
